DETAILED ACTION

Page 2

1. Applicant's arguments concerning the rejections in the last Office action are persuasive and, therefore, that action is withdrawn and a new Office action is hereby issued.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.
- 3. Claim 17 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by MacVicar (6,247,626).

MacVicar discloses an explosion-driven setting tool (10), comprising a setting mechanism (piston 16) driven by propellant (propane in canister 34), ignition means (82), a receptacle for holding the propellant (canister 34), receiver for canister (tool's body around canister 34), data storage identification unit (fig. 23, 300) in which propellant supply level is stored (fig. 23, "fuel pressure sensor"), a display (fig. 23, user interface module and visual display), a data communication interface (eeprom; column 14, ine 66 to column 15, line 15, which depicts the use of eeprom for the storage and processing of various inputs, including vessel pressure), the data processing unit (microprocessor detailed in figure 23) data storage identification unit (fuel control circuit in figure 17). Note especially column 15, lines 25-31 and 42-64 for disclosure of the storage of propellant level and data read-out from the storage.

- 4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 1-16 and 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over MacVicar (6,247,626) in view of Thielman et al (2004/0215407) or Mandie et al (5,889,211). MacVicar discloses an explosion-driven setting tool (10), comprising a setting mechanism (piston 16) driven by propellant (propane in canister 34), ignition means (82), a receptacle for holding the propellant (canister 34), receiver for canister (tool's body around canister 34), data storage identification unit (fig. 23, 300) in which propellant supply level is stored (fig. 23, "fuel pressure sensor"), a display (fig. 23, user interface module and visual display), a data communication interface (eeprom; column 14, ine 66 to column 15, line 15, which depicts the use of eeprom for the storage and processing of various inputs, including vessel pressure), the data processing unit (microprocessor detailed in figure 23) data storage identification unit (fuel control circuit in figure 17). Note especially column 15, lines 25-31 and 42-64 for disclosure of the storage of propellant level and data read-out from the storage. MacVicar fails to teach the data storage identification unit affixed to the propellant housing or the details of the data communication interface. Both Thielman et al and Maudie et al teach that it is known to to have fuel level sensor systems mounted on the housing of the fuel to measure and record the level of the fuel (disclosed as various types and physical states) and means (including contact elements and antennas) to read-out the fuel data to a processing system. See especially Paragraphs 23, 35, and 39 of Thielman et al and column 2, lines 4-9; and column 6, lines 54-65 of Mandie et al. Motivation to combine is the mere substitution of the placement of the data storage location (with the attendant advantage of having the fuel data physically attached to a portable fuel housing) and the employment of known data transfer systems to move the data from storage to a processing system. To employ the teachings of either Thielman et al or Mandie et al on the setting tool of MacVicar and have the claimed data storage and transfer system is considered to have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art.

6. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
